Online Summer Class
JUNE 8–JULY 9 2020

ANTH 310-102
CULTURE AND THE INDIVIDUAL

How do individuals act while they are surrounded by various cultural and societal practices? What is the role of individuals in the formation of cultures? This course addresses these two main questions from anthropological perspectives. Accordingly, the relationship between individuals and cultures will be examined in the spheres of history, memory, economy, politics, identity, and technology. This is an online class and all readings and assignments will be available on D2L. The main requirements of the course include weekly written assignments, quizzes, and a final exam covering all readings and films assigned.

Instructor: Ziya Kaya
E-mail: ziyakaya@email.arizona.edu