ARIZONA

Desert Archaeology, Inc.

Desert Archaeology is an Arizonan small business offering cultural resources research and consulting services through offices in Tucson and Phoenix. The company has been in the forefront of cultural resources management since 1982, serving a diverse set of clients—from government agencies to private firms. Desert Archaeology has successfully completed over 1,750 projects in the Greater Southwest, ranging from small surveys to large excavations. We have established a record of work that is timely, cost effective, and of the highest professional quality. Desert Archaeology has deep roots in the southwestern United States. With over 25 years of experience, the company has developed strong, working relationships with federal, state, and local regulatory agencies, as well as a fundamental understanding of the region's cultural resources. This translates into highly efficient assessments of project effects and innovative solutions to regulatory compliance.

Arizona PIRG Student Capters Interships

Arizona PIRG interns earn course credit by working on research projects or campaigns. The purpose of the internship program is to provide the opportunity to take education out of the classroom, to do hands-on work, learn important skills, and make a direct impact on public interest issues. On each of its college campuses, Arizona PIRG organizers work closely with university faculty to offer course credit internships that combine classroom learning with hands on experience. Arizona PIRG offers internships on all of its campaigns.

The primary entry-level internships are:

- Organizing Internship: Organizing internships give students an opportunity to coordinate an Arizona PIRG campaign on campus or in the community. Students work closely with Arizona PIRG staff to develop coalitions, recruit volunteers, coordinate events, and strategize for victory.
- Grassroots Internship: Demonstrating public support is integral in winning public interest campaigns. All Arizona PIRG projects include grassroots organizing, and grassroots interns are an important piece of concentrating public concern and presenting it to decision makers. In years past, grassroots interns have played a crucial role in the gathering of over one million public comments to the president in an effort to protect 60 million acres of pristine National Forests. Student interns worked with the media to educate the community about the plans of four of the world's largest oil companies to drill in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

- Internet Internship: The internet has become a powerful organizing tool on college campuses. Students increasingly use the internet as their primary medium for news, research, and communication. Internet interns play a key roll in recruiting students, communicating the goals and accomplishments of the chapter, and building support for Arizona PIRG's campaigns through email and other online forums.
- Media Internship: Alerting the public through the media is a key part of all Arizona PIRG projects. Arizona PIRG media interns work to use newspapers, television and radio news to educate the public about issues that concern them. In addition to learning important media skills, interns do great public interest work. In just the past thirteen years alone, media interns have helped to pull over 60 dangerous toys from the shelves through their annual Toy Safety press conferences.
- Research Internship: The problems that face our society seem complex and often daunting. Arizona PIRG research interns take important information, cut through any confusion, and present that information in a way that both educates and activates the campus and the community. In recent years, Arizona PIRG research has documented consumer scams like high bank and credit card fees.

Museum of Northern Arizona Heritage Program Internship

Summer 2011

The mission of the Museum of Northern Arizona is to inspire a sense of love and responsibility for the beauty and diversity of the Colorado Plateau through collecting, studying, interpreting, and preserving the region's natural and cultural heritage.

The Heritage Program will create and execute four major arts festivals for the 2011 season: the 78th Annual Hopi Festival of Arts and Culture, the 62nd Annual Navajo Festival of Arts and Culture, and the 8th Annual Celebraciones de la Gente Festival and the 21st Zuni Festival of Arts and Culture.

The Museum of Northern Arizona Heritage Program seeks an enthusiastic, motivated, and organized individual to work in an enriching environment. This unpaid internship is open to students seeking experience in festival program coordination and administration. Housing is provided*. Intern activities include planning and implementing educational programs, participating in festival art collection trips, and facilitating the festivals.

This internship will provide the following experiences:

- Coordinating festival programs
- Customer service, bookkeeping, and an introduction to program finances
- Observing and assisting with a variety of MNA activities

- Becoming a member of the MNA community and participating in Museum events

Smithsonian Internships

An internship at the Smithsonian Institution is a prearranged, structured learning experience scheduled within a specific time frame. The experience must be relevant to the intern's academic and professional goals, and to research and museum activities of the Institution. An internship is performed under the direct supervision of Smithsonian staff.

Internships, for the most part, are arranged individually. Information and applications may be obtained by contacting the appropriate internship coordinator. In addition to the information below, additional internship information can be found at <http://www.smithsonian.org/interns>.

Refer to the listings below for deadlines, addresses and other specific information regarding various internship programs. Please note: all Smithsonian interns must be at least 16 years old.

Minority Internships

The Office of Fellowships offers a number of opportunities to increase participation of minority groups who are underrepresented in Smithsonian scholarly programs, in the disciplines of research conducted at the Institution, and in the museum field. Stipend awards are available for interns through the Minority Student Awards Program to participate in supervised on-going research, or museum-related activities for periods of ten weeks. Minority undergraduate and beginning graduate students are encouraged to apply. Students should contact the Office of Fellowships for application information.

Term: 10 weeks

Deadlines for online application: February 1 for Summer (starting June 1) or for Fall (starting October 1) and October 1 for Spring (starting February 1)

Stipend: $550 per week

Native American Internships

Appointments are offered to Native American students, who are formally or informally related to a Native American community, to pursue internship projects related to Native American topics and using Native American resources at the Smithsonian. Appointments are spent in residence at the Institution's facilities under the supervision of Smithsonian research and professional staff members. Appointments of 10 weeks are available to undergraduate or graduate students, and provide stipends and a travel allowance. Students should contact the Office of Fellowships for application information.

Term: 10 weeks

Deadlines: February 1 for Summer (to begin after June 1) and for Fall (to begin after October 1) and October 1 for Spring (to begin after January 1)

Stipend: $550 per week

James E. Webb Internship for Minority Undergraduate Juniors, Seniors and Graduate Students in Business and Public Administration

This program was established in honor of the late James. E. Webb, Regent Emeritus and former Administrator of the National Air and Space Administration (NASA), to promote excellence in the management of not-for-profit organizations. Internships are offered to U.S. minority undergraduate junior, seniors and graduate students majoring in areas of business or public administration. These opportunities are intended to increase participation of minority groups who are underrepresented in the management of not-for-profit scientific and cultural organizations.

Interns are placed in offices, museums, and research institutes throughout the Smithsonian Institution.

Term: 10 weeks (starting in June)

Deadlines: February 1 for Summer (to begin after June 1) and for Fall (to begin after October 1) and October 1 for Spring (to begin after January 1)

Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Internship Grants

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences offers an Internship Grants Program to assist in fostering educational opportunities for students at accredited educational institutions and other nonprofit organizations who might not otherwise be able to participate in a motion picture production-focused internship due to financial limitations. In 2010, the program distributed over $162,000 to 21 universities and colleges.

The Academy also offers Institutional Grants ranging from $5,000-$20,000 to foster educational activities between the public and the film industry while encouraging the appreciation of motion pictures as both an art form and a vocation. Grants are awarded to nonprofit film organizations and to film programs within schools, colleges, universities, and other institutions and nonprofit organizations. Types of programs include:

- workshops and conferences in which college students are trained in one of the craft fields of film production (directing, cinematography, screenwriting, editing);
- internship programs for college students;
- library and archival projects in which the papers of filmmakers are preserved or made available to the public;
- screening programs, especially those in which filmmakers interact with audiences;
- seminar programs, in which film professionals discuss their work;
- teacher training programs, in which production techniques or film appreciation information is presented for teachers to take back to their classrooms;
- training/bridge programs, in which college students and adults are trained for and then placed in film industry jobs (this includes mentoring programs); and
- visiting artist programs in which a filmmaker spends several days in residence at a university or media center.

Grants are not awarded to cover the expenses of producing a film or to film festivals. (The academy has a separate festival grants program.)

DEADLINE: 2011 applications are not yet available. Please check back in the summer for further updates.

International Radio and Television Society Summer Fellowships

The IRTS Foundation requests applications for its 2011 Summer Fellowship Program, June 5-August 6, 2011 in New York City. Juniors, seniors, and graduate students in Communication and Journalism are eligible for all-expense-paid fellowships to learn the realities of the business world, gain practical experience, and receive career-planning advice. The program begins with an extensive 1-week orientation to broadcasting, cable, advertising, and new media, followed by an 8-week internship with a New York-based corporation.

Several other internship programs and deadlines are announced every year on their website at: <http://www.irts.org/programs/sfp/sfp.html>

Participatory Learning

The Digital Media and Learning Competition, supported through a grant to the University of California, Irvine and administered by HASTAC, has announced a second annual open-call competition that will provide $2 million in awards to innovators shaping the field of digital media and learning. Awards will be given in two categories:

1) Innovation in Participatory Learning Awards will support projects that demonstrate new modes of participatory learning, in which people take part in virtual communities, share ideas, comment on one another's projects, and advance goals together. Successful projects will promote participatory learning in a variety of environments: through the creation of new digital tools, modification of existing ones, or use of digital media in some other novel way. Winners will receive between $30,000 and $250,000.

2) Young Innovator Awards are designed to encourage young people aged 18-25 to think boldly about "what comes next" in participatory learning and to contribute to making it happen. Winners will receive funding to do an internship with a sponsor organization to help bring their ideas to implementation. Winners will receive between $5,000 and $30,000.

DEADLINE for next competition will be announced at <http://www.dmlcompetition.net/>

Crow Canyon Research Internships

Crow Canyon's research focuses on the ancestral Pueblo (Anasazi) occupation of the Mesa Verde region. Starting in 2011, we will begin a new project that will focus on a pivotal, but underinvestigated and poorly understood, time in Pueblo history: the Basketmaker III period (A.D. 500–750). Entitled The Basketmaker Communities Project: Early Pueblo Society in the Mesa Verde Region, this study will examine the origins of the Mesa Verde Pueblo tradition through test and intensive excavations at a seventh-century Basketmaker community. The centerpiece of the project is the Dillard site, a ceremonial center that includes a great kiva.

The Crow Canyon Archaeological Center maintains high standards of research and scholarship. Students and adults participating in the Center's programs are closely supervised by research and education staff members in the field and the lab, ensuring a positive learning experience for them, as well as high-quality research for the profession. In addition, American Indians—many of them descendants of the ancestral Pueblo people—consult on all facets of our research, and colleagues from many other disciplines contribute their expertise to help us achieve our objectives. In such an environment, research interns have the opportunity to gain valuable experience in working with, and learning from, a wide variety of people

15. Colonial Williamsburg Internship Program

Below are several potential internship opportunities. These are intended to provide some guidance about what you might want to do, but are not intended to be exclusive. If you have another idea in mind, please feel free to bring it up.

Please also note that the opportunities below, and any other internship options, are dependent on the availability of staff to supervise and will vary from season to season. We will try if at all possible to match you with a staff member who can provide you a rewarding experience.

- Field Methods and Techniques

- Undergraduates: Interns will work alongside professional, experienced historical archaeologists to excavate an archaeological site. This option may or may not be available, depending upon the status of current field programs. Generally the intern will be required to have some previous excavation experience.
- Graduates: Interns will develop a course of study, dependent upon prior experience, to investigate state-of-the-art techniques and programs for recording and presenting the archaeological record in three dimensions. This might include using Computer Aided Design (CAD) and GIS software.

- Curation/Collections Management

Collections Management and Curatorial responsibilities encompass the processing, documentation, preservation, and analysis of the archaeological collection of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. The collection is maintained as a research tool in order to provide support of the Foundation's education and preservation mission, to afford accessibility for scholars, and to contribute to the overall understanding of Williamsburg's history.

- General laboratory internship: This is designed as an introduction to archaeological laboratory procedures and curatorial practices. It is best for the individual wishing to gain basic experience in a variety of activities.
- Project-based internship: Project focused internships include options for work in/with Documentation/Archives, Artifact Processing, Curatorial Practices, Material Culture Analysis/Research, and Cataloging. This internship will also accommodate those individuals with specific material culture research plans.
- African-American Archaeology
Colonial Williamsburg has been a leader in the field of African-American archaeology for many years, a research focus which complements the museum's commitment to the interpretation of the African-American past. This work began with important early excavations at the Carter's Grove slave quarter, and continues with recent research at sites within the Historic Area, at plantations that existed at the outskirts of Williamsburg, and even sites elsewhere in the British colonial empire (including Bermuda and Barbados, particularly). Internship opportunities include focused studies of existing archaeological collections, ongoing research on slaves and slave owners using archival sources, or helping to develop strategies for interpreting findings to the public.
- Environmental Archaeology
Environmental research is a significant component of archaeological practice at Colonial Williamsburg. Faunal analysis and archaeobotany (including the analysis of seeds, wood, and phytoliths) all play an important role in our reconstruction of past lifeways. Since each field requires specialized training, interns interested in laboratory technical work are expected to focus on areas for which they have a strong commitment. However, other opportunities exist for interns to learn and participate, through work with documentation on gardens, horticulture, animal husbandry, landscapes, database design, or public presentation. On-going projects that interns may wish to pursue include:
 - Documentary database: Interns will learn about animal husbandry, agriculture, plant types, gardening, hunting, and fishing in the colonial Chesapeake by researching early documents, and assisting in entering these records into a computer database.
 - Archaeobotanical research: Depending on skill level, interns will learn the basics of archaeobotanical research, including flotation, processing samples, or the identification of plant remains such as seeds, wood, and nutshell. Other projects include processing soil samples for phytoliths, starch grains (exploring the use of root and tuber crops), spherulites (signatures of animal dung), diatoms, etc. Non-laboratory projects may include developing interpretive programs or exhibits, data analysis, documentary research, or work with comparative collections.
- Conservation
Conservation is important to ensure both the survival of excavated materials and the recovery of significant information regarding the manufacture, use and processing of individual items. There are several ongoing projects in the lab that interns might become involved with, including:
 - Treatment of recently excavated materials. Interns involved with this project will be expected to be involved in a number of functions, such as x-raying artifacts, filing treatment reports, photographing incoming and outgoing artifacts, and researching specific classes of artifacts and their manufacture.

- Analysis and remediation of past treatments. Conservation methods have changed over time, and as treatments have aged, some have had a detrimental effect on the collection. Interns involved with this project will help to survey the collection to determine condition and then conduct experiments to determine the best method to retreat affected portions of the collection. They may also help to retreat materials where protocols have been established.
- The burial environment. The Archaeological Conservation Lab and the Department of Archaeological Research are developing a program to study the effects of the burial environment on several classes of archaeological objects and to determine the factors governing the preservation and deterioration of artifacts, how these factors interrelate, and how they can be measured effectively. Interns involved in this project will monitor sites, conduct data analysis, do documentary research, or work with materials excavated from recent sites.

National Council for Preservation Education. Internships with the National Park Service, Department of the Interior and Veterans Administration

The National Park Service, the Department of the Interior and the Veterans Administration will offer internships during the Summer of 2011. Internships are for ten (10) weeks, at forty (40) hours per week and in Washington, DC except where noted. Stipends are issued based on a rate of twelve dollars per hour. The exact starting dates will be determined on a case-by-case basis. For all internships, computer and word processing skills are desirable. To speed processing of your request and give you a faster review of your application, please scan your materials electronically and email them as a single Adobe Acrobat (.pdf) file containing both signed application and transcripts to Michael Tomlan at Cornell University (email: mat4@cornell.edu). If electronic submission is not possible, all application materials should be mailed to the National Council for Preservation Education, Attention: Michael A. Tomlan, 210 West Sibley Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, 14853-6701. Please indicate by number the internship(s) in which you are interested. Please be aware that, unless otherwise noted, interns are responsible for travel to and housing at the internship location. This should be kept in mind particularly for those internships in the West. In some cases the supervising office may be able to assist in locating housing but it is ultimately up to the individual accepting the internship to find accommodations. Also be aware that, due to Federal Government-wide security requirements, a background check will be required for any position which involves access to Government computers, if you are chosen for that position. This may include providing information about recent housing and employment history, and those positions may require US citizenship or possession of a valid student visa to complete the check. The position supervisor will have more information on requirements and procedures at the time of hiring.

Cultural Resources Diversity Internship Program

Currently in its 12th year, the Cultural Resources Diversity Internship Program (CRDIP) offers unique career exploration opportunities in historic preservation/cultural resources work for undergraduate and graduate students of diverse backgrounds. The program places interns with National Park Service (NPS) park units and administrative offices, other federal agencies, state historic preservation offices, local governments, and private organizations. Intern sponsors provide work experiences that assist interns with building their resumes in this field. Intern sponsors are chosen through a competitive process, including submission of a project proposal for the internship. The CRDIP is part of a comprehensive effort to diversify the historic preservation/cultural resources field.

The UA/NASA Space Grant Steering Committee

Soliciting applications for the 2011-2012 Space Grant Graduate Fellowships. We seek new and continuing UA graduate students interested in promoting the understanding of scientific research to the public whose program of study addresses any aspect of NASA's mission (including elements as diverse as the Space and Earth Sciences, Science Policy, and Science Education). The fellowship, which is co-sponsored by UA/NASA Space Grant and the applicant's nominating Department, includes a stipend of $16,000 for one or two years, both in- and out-of-state fee/tuition waivers, student health insurance, and some scientific travel expenses. Though totals vary based on individual circumstances, the total value of a fellowship is approximately $29,000.

Applications—including a transcript, two letters of recommendation, letters of support (optional) from those cooperating in the education outreach effort, and the Department Head's signature committing to the departmental cost share—are due in the Space Grant Office (Room 349, Kuiper Space Sciences Building) by Thursday, March 24, 2011. Awards for fall 2011 will be announced around March 31, 2011.

U.S. Department of State Global Internships & Careers

Whatever your background or major, you can discover a world of opportunities as a student intern with the U.S. Department of State. Whether in Washington D.C., or overseas, you'll have one of the most rewarding experiences you can have as a student or recent graduate – working closely with Foreign Service Officers addressing global issues as they help transform societies into stronger democracies and full partners in the international community.

INTERNATIONAL

Internship Program in German State Parliaments

Èmigré Memorial German Internships in Bundestag (EMGIP – Bundestag) offers internship opportunities for U.S. and Canadian students in the German parliament, the Bundestag. Internships are 2 months long in positions matching the student's interest and experience. Interns receive about 1,100/month from the German Bundestag. Subsidized health insurance is available through DAAD for a monthly fee. DAAD can help the interns to obtain housing in Berlin and make contacts with fellow international interns and German students. Travel expenses are the intern's responsibility. Applicants should be advanced undergraduates or graduate students in fields such as political science, international relations, law, history, economics or German. Students must be able to fully communicate in German. U.S. and Canadian citizens and permanent residents are eligible to apply.

DEADLINE: September 15, 2011

Uganda: Parliamentary Research and Internship Program

Higher Education for Development expects to make one award of up to $400,000 for a 3-year higher education partnership, contingent on USAID funding. The objective of the Parliamentary Research and Internship Program (PRIP) is to increase the capacity of the Ugandan partner institution(s) to train and support interns (undergraduate and/or graduate students) from local universities to work with parliamentary committees and caucuses. The partner U.S. institution(s) will take the lead in providing the training and technical assistance to faculty colleagues at the partner Ugandan institutions on topics related to in-depth research, analysis and summary of issues before the committees and caucuses, comparative research and analysis with other legislatures, both regionally and internationally, field research when necessary, and legislative research/analysis. USAID/Uganda has identified the Islamic University in Uganda, Nkumba University, and Uganda Martyrs University as the preferred partner Ugandan institutions. U.S. applicants may choose to work with one, two, or all three institutions.

DEADLINE: contact Charlie Koo (202-243-7680; ckoo@HEDprogram.org).

Fieldwork Extension to the British Archaeology Summer School 2011

Fieldwork Extension to the 2011 British Archaeology Summer School held at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. The fieldwork will commence in early August at the Damerham Archaeological Project excavations in Ancient Wessex, which are being co-directed by Dr Sheila Kohring from Cambridge University. Students will be able to spend two weeks (or, as an option, four weeks) on site learning excavation, survey and artifact processing techniques. Further details are provided on the website.

Applications for the Fieldwork Extension are invited from students attending the British Archaeology Summer School. Please note that places on the excavation are strictly limited so early application is advised.

Congressional Internships. These must be arranged through the congressional representation in the district where you live. Write to the representatives district office for information on how to apply. Apply as soon as possible. Internships generally involve constituency work. These internships look great on resumes and graduate school applications. There are plenty to go around and you can try actually applying to representatives in surrounding districts. Their constituents have a priority, but if there is an opening, you can get it. A word of advice: sell your anthropological skills and training. Most of these internships are awarded to political science majors because anthropology students never think to apply.

The Africa Fund and the American Committee on Africa. Write to Research Director, 198 Broadway, New York, N. Y. 10038. Interns are for the most part volunteers, and work with both organizations, assuming responsibility for regular office functions, as well as taking on individual projects related to their specific interests.
